It doesn't get any easier (or low-cost) than playing around with colorful pillows. On this window seat, hot pink ones—made with fabric from Threadcount Textile & Design—perk up the black-and-white pair and the striped seat cushion.

Nothing makes a bold statement in a living room quite like a bright-hued sofa. A no-fail way to make it work: Choose a favorite shade, then surround it with muted tones (a soft rug, pillows, and a throw). This custom blue beauty is from Funky Furniture in San Francisco.

One of the simplest ways to personalize a kitchen, especially an all-white one: Add barstools in a can't-miss-it color. A whole row of 'em makes hanging out irresistible. These fiery metal versions are from overstock.com.

A mix of wood and white cabinets makes a kitchen look modern, but put in bright pendants like these sunny yellow ones by Muuto, and suddenly it's exciting. Since they're not too big (15½ inches in diameter), they don't overpower the space.

This green stunner of a rug may look vintage, but it's actually from World Market. Layering a vivid rug in a smaller size (this is 5 feet by 8 feet) over a larger jute one gives the color more impact.

Even a room with plenty of texture (a grass-cloth-covered table, a turned-leg ottoman, a spiky mirror, and, yes, a kitten!) needs one attention-grabbing element. This 30-inch-tall turquoise gourd lamp by Surya does the trick.

A three-drawer chest in a knockout color—this cobalt version with preppy green tassels is from Oomph—packs enough punch for a two-story entry. Imagine the potential for a small space! Jazzing up an old one is a quick afternoon project; use high-gloss spray paint for that lacquered look.

It only takes one supersized piece (like this 36-inch-by-48-inch canvas) to transform stark white walls, but you can also bring the drama with a group of smaller prints in coordinating colors.
